MESSAGE

Information and communication technology (ICT) has always mattered in agriculture and livestock production. People have been exchanging knowledge with one another ever since they first started cultivating crops and, rearing livestock. Even though the livestock industry makes up almost one-fourth of the country's GDP, animal productivity and health continue to be important concerns. Now a day's mobile phones are part and parcel of every individual, because of their handy nature, affordability, and ready reckoner in all daily life activities. Fortunately, new developments in ICT and the wide spread of Internet access and mobile communications appear to offer some solutions to meet the information and advisory need of even small-scale livestock farmers. Predicting livestock disease outbreaks can be of significant value to India's long-term sustainable development. Dissemination of such animal disease outbreak information to farmers keeps them cautious about appropriate treatment, biosafety/biosecurity, and preventive and control measures to be adopted.

The ICT-enabled livestock extension initiatives will assist extension workers to create customized extension materials that address the actual needs of the farmers they serve. One such extension activity implemented by Assam Agricultural University in the form of the directory "CONNECT NORTH EAST VETS" is an information platform to reach farmers who cannot be contacted personally by extension workers, in the shortest possible time with the advent of ICT applications. This application will bridge the gap between livestock farmers and extension systems through the usage of ICT. This platform will help to overcome the constraints of poor access to appropriate information for farmers and various other extension delivery agents regarding livestock productivity and health. This Directory has been designed in such a way as to boost communication among the stakeholders and will serve the purpose. This will boost the understanding of the socio-economic impact of livestock diseases and the implementation of treatment and preventive programs by veterinarians.

I wish this initiative to be purposeful and meaningful to farmers and also useful to the stakeholders across North Eastern States. Let me congratulate the dynamic team behind the conceptualization of "CONNECT NORTH EAST VETS" and put forward this into reality. Without their commitment and contributions, this informative directory would not have been possible and successfully delivered at this time. I would like to compliment the efforts of Dr. N. N. Barman, Project Co-ordinator cum Professor & Head, Department of Veterinary Microbiology and Assam Agricultural University for this valuable initiative.

With warm regards,

Dr. K.P. Suresh

PREFACE

Use of information and communication technologies (ICT) can revolutionize in both agriculture and livestock productions and health management in India. Livestock health management is the key issue in restoring farm economy. Effective management of animal health depends on up to date knowledge about diseases and real time reporting of disease outbreaks. Importantly, North Eastern States are surrounded by porous international boundaries. Incursion of Trans-boundary and emerging diseases is possible along with unrestricted movement of animals and their products. But the biggest issues in health care sector in the North Eastern part of India, especially in livestock farming is the poor accessibility between different stake holders (farmers, doctors, para-vet, animal health care clinics, medical stores). Majority of the farmers in NER are poor and their farms are unorganized in nature. At present, majority of the health-related consultations rely mostly on personal visit to ailing animals. As most of the unorganized farms are located in remote places, reporting of diseases in time is very difficult. Farmers are often deprived of health support in need and lost their productive animals. With the advancement of 4G penetration in NER, creation of Mobile and Internet based solutions to facilitate communication between different stake holders is becoming reality. Again, smart disease surveillance based on information and communication technologies (ICT) is to make efficient disease surveillance and hence help in identifying the trends of the various diseases.

Digital Disease Diagnosis and Health Management System (DDHMS) is an innovative disease diagnosis and health management system for livestock farming which focuses on meeting 3Ss in livestock farming; (i) Smart communication and exchange, (ii) Smart Disease Diagnosis and (ii) Smart Livestock health management. In recent past, studies have shown that using visible and observable symptoms, images of various affected organs many of the animal diseases can be effectively detected using state-of-the-art machine learning techniques.

Under DBT ADMaC phase II project entitled, “Upgradation and implementation of Knowledge Based System (KBS) in NER of India (An extended activity of Advanced animal Disease Diagnosis and Management Consortium (ADMaC))” use of mobile applications for seamless information exchange between farmers, veterinarians, paravets, and animal health care centers is the prime mandate. For seamless communication and information exchange regarding animal health and their management through mobile and desktop applications contact details of all institutions (Veterinary Institutes, Diagnostic laboratories, State Animal health department, Veterinary Dispensaries, Scientists, Doctors, paravets) and geographical locations of all institutions are perfectly documented and compiled as “CONNECT NORTH EAST VETS”. The Directory includes contact details of Vice-Chancellors /Directors /Deans /Principals /Scientists /Professors /Veterinary Officers/ and other Scientific Staffs who are working in permanent positions under various establishments. The contact detail includes the official address along with mobile number and email Id and Latitude-Longitude of the institute. It is expected that the directory will boost communication among the stakeholders and will be a record for the future. Such document will enable systematic capturing of information exchanged between different stakeholders and perform geo-spatio-temporal based precision recommendation for animal health. Compiled contact details will not only bring the players closer, but also help in producing healthy and hygienic livestock.

We hope this CONNECT NORTH EAST VETS directory will provide all pertinent contact details for establishing network with institutes and end users for the benefit of animal welfare. Being the first of its kind, any suggestions, ideas, and comments from the readers are highly appreciated for improvement in future edition. Send your suggestions at email: nnbarman@gmail.com or aadsmckhanapara@gmail.com

The editors acknowledged the contributions of all the Directors of AH & Vety Department, field Veterinary Officer, Paravet staffs of eight NER states, Students, NGOs, progressive farmers, project staffs for providing their inputs in compiling the directory and the Assam Agricultural University for providing all necessary facilities. We are also grateful to the DBT, Govt. of India for the financial support.
